Meet Hollywood director Steve Greenburg

Tim: Last month you won an Oscar for your thriller “Who Killed Harry Mack?” Are thrillers your favourite kind of film?

Steve: I like making all kinds of films: thrillers, comedies, horror films, westerns. Sometimes writers give me very good stories for thrillers, but there are lots of things that make a movie good. Good actors and actresses, studios and sometimes the weather can help you shoot a good scene.

Tim: What are your plans for the future?

Steve: I am going to make more comedies. I believe it is nice to make people laugh. I want to work with great actors and shoot films people will enjoy. I won't stop making films. Movies are my life!

Tim: Will Home Cinema and computers change movies?

Steve: It's difficult to say. I don't know, but I think people will watch movies at home more often. Films will have two or three endings and people will choose the ending they like.

Tim: Thank you very much. Good luck with your next film.

Steve won the Oscar last year.
